Our relationships—
Intervention or non-intervention?

We live with others, even if we think we’re alone. Parents, children, friends, colleagues, neighbours. It doesn’t always go the way we’d like, that’s for sure! Often we find ourselves running into brick walls, whether visible or invisible. They don’t want to know about our attempts at (re)conciliation, our ideas about living in harmony. But we don’t want to give up. How can our practice of Mindfulness, which is not lacking in resources, help us maintain these relationships in a state of harmony?

Schedule (sample)

Breathing in, I know I am breathing in Breathing out, I know I am breathing out

Awareness of breathing is the foundation of our practice. It is the link between the mind and the body. When we lose ourselves in thinking about the past or worrying about the future, our body may be present but our mind is somewhere else. Awareness of our breathing unifies body and mind, here and now.

Seated at the foot of the bodhi tree, my back is straight, my posture stable...

The goal of sitting meditation (or any other type) is not to reach enlightenment, but rather to enjoy fully the present moment, to enjoy the sense of well-being that arises when we are fully conscious of our breath, to look deeply and to let go...

I am home, I have arrived...

We stop running, and we walk.It’s another way to meditate. We pay attention the contact of our feet with the earth. We walk just to walk, without going anywhere, and the mind establishes itself in the here and now. We think neither of yesterday nor of tomorrow. We live simply, from moment to moment, far from our problems, and we smile as we leave behind us footprints of joy and serenity!

The dharma is deep and lovely....

The word “dharma” also means “teaching.” Listening to a dharma talk can also be a form of meditation during which we listen with all our attention, serenely allowing the teachings to penetrate us, as the rain penetrates the earth.

The Five Mindfulness Trainings

The Five Mindfulness Trainings are the foundation for happiness for the family and for society. We ask that you not smoke, drink alcohol, eat meat, and we ask that you refrain from sexual relations during the retreat.

Listening, without judging or reacting...

In dharma discussion we mainly share our thoughts on the dharma talks. It is a time for listening, sharing our experience and our understanding of the teachings, or for asking questions in order to better understand the practice.

This food is the gift of the entire universe...

Eating in silence is a powerful meditative exercise which permits us to appreciate our food. In contemplating what sustains us, we begin to realize our interdependence with the entire universe. Each type of food contains the essence of the sun and the earth. In looking deeply into what we are eating, whether with family or friends, we cultivate our compassion for those who have nothing to eat.

The Noble Silence

The practice of Noble Silence puts us in deeper contact with those around us. It can afford us much joy and understanding. We practice Noble Silence during most of the day in our Mindfulness practice, and everyone benefits!
